THE PEOPLE WHO LIVE IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD

Leone Stanaback lives on Aquarina. She and her husband moved there in 1958. Leone is a native of the area having grown up in Davisburg. She went to Holly High School. She and her husband, Ralph, were married in 1941. They lived in homes on Clintonville Rd. and Lake Angelus Rd. before moving into LOHA. The price of the home (around $14,000.) and the lake are what attracted them to the subdivision. There were many years that the couple kept friends' or relatives' children for the whole summer. They all enjoyed the amenities of the lake. Leone was a foster parent. She still loves kids, music, reading and plants. She and her husband both loved northern MI. and had a cabin in Rose City. It had no indoor plumbing or electricity.

Ray Pigman and his wife, Betty, live on Embarcadero. They moved there in 1971 from Pontiac. Both had been single parents when they married 37 years ago. Ray was a painter by trade. He painted houses, schools and GM trucks. They both retired in '83. Ray is also an artist. He presently does woodcarvings, which include animals, birds, people and even cane heads. His oil paintings include wondrous scenes of mountains, rivers, thatched houses and flowers. Ray served in WWI as an officer in the Air Force. His route to England from Florida in a B26 included stops in Puerto Rico, British Guyana, Brazil, Ascension Islands, Liberia, Marrakech and Casablanca. Ray's hobbies also include reading. Together he and his wife have 8 children.

Deepest Sympathy

Our condolences go to the family of Ron Goins, who passed away on Mar. 19. He lived on Embarcadero.

Correction to Mar. Newsletter

Joan Kniffel only watched 50 children, not 500. 500 did sound like a lot.
